Marriott Hotel Albany, New York

Gaming and Gambling: Recognizing the Problem, Understanding the Transition, and Crafting a Response

Everyone, from prevention to recovery, has a role in addressing the transition of gaming to problem gambling, but are we really sure what that role is? In NYCPG's first ever preconference, attendees will learn about trends in the world of video and online gaming, and how participation in these activities can easily shift from pleasure to problem. Small group work will give participants the opportunity to discuss what their field is, or could be, doing to address the transition from pleasure to problem among gaming youth. The session will end with a large group discussion about making the local-global connection, what tools will be necessary moving forward, and how we can effectively work together in order to address this issue.

Event is FREE for those who register for the main conference.
